the subject of the following study is theories of memory the first part is a study of one broad type of theory which is very widely adhered to at this time it enjoys great popularity among neuro physiologists neuropsychologists and more generally among scientifically oriented people who have directed their attention to questions about memory further this way of looking at the matter is not confined to scientific professionals indeed we can find popularized versions of the view in magazines like time and

years ago prompted by Grise, Apostel and Papert we undertook the study of functions but until now we did not properly understand the relations between functions and operations and their increasing interactions at the level of constituted functions by contrast certain recent studies on constitutive functions or preoperatory functional schemes have convinced us of the existence of a sort of logic of functions springing from the schemes of actions which is prior to the logic of operations drawn from the general and reversible coordinations between actions this preoperatory logic accounts for the very general and until now unexplained primacy of order relations between 4 and 7 years of age which is natural since functions are ordered dependences and result from oriented applications and while this logic ends up in a positive manner in formalizable structures it has gaps or limitations psychologically we are interested in understanding the systematic errors due to this primacy of order such as the undifferentiation of longer and farther or the non-conservations caused by ordinal estimations of levels etc as opposed to extensive or metric evaluations in a sense which is psychologically very real this preoperatory logic of constitutive functions represents only the first half of operatory logic if this can be said and it is reversibility which allows the construction of the other half by completing the initial one-way structures this book is intended as a contribution to the foundations of the sciences of man especially the social sciences it has been argued with increasing frequency in recent years that the vocabulary of social science is to a large extent an action vocabulary and that any attempt to systematize concepts and establish bases for understanding in the field cannot therefore succeed unless it is firmly built on action theory i think that these claims are sub stantially correct but at the same time it seems to me that action theory as it is relevant to social science still awaits vital contributions from logic and philosophy for example it has often been said rightly i believe that situa tions in which two or more agents interact constitute the subject matter of social science but have we got an action theory which is rich enough or com prehensive enough to allow us to characterize the interaction situation i think not once we have such a theory however we should be able to give an accurate account of central social phenomena and to articulate our concep tions about the nature of social reality the conceptual scheme advanced in this book consists in the first instance of solutions to a number of characterization problems i e problems which may be expressed by questions of the form what is the nature of
